Dillard University in New Orleans included a "Thank You" to Centenary during its June 2006 commencement exercises. The Centenary community was pleased to be able to say "You're welcome" to the students and faculty of Dillard University following the devastation of Hurricane Katrina. Among many hurricane-relief activities that took place in 2005-06 at Centenary were the housing of 230 Dillard evacuees in the Centenary Gold Dome and Fitness Center, the collection of funds and supplies on their behalf and assistance with transportation home for many students.

Dear Friends of Centenary,

Centenary College of Louisiana fosters a rich intellectual and social atmosphere. Students work within a strong community to create personalized, distinctive experiences. Building lives of integrity, our students explore the unfamiliar, invent new approaches to understanding, and connect their work and lives to the world at large. Centenary students enjoy a vibrant college life and achieve superior preparation for futures still unimagined. Centenary traces its founding to 1825 and is affiliated with the United Methodist Church.

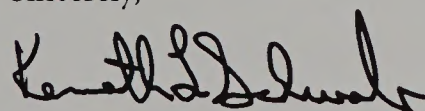

If we had but a few moments to tell a stranger about Centenary College of Louisiana, how might we do that? The words above attempt to answer that question and are the result of a year-long conversation among many Centenary constituencies. They are one distillation of terms that describe the purpose of Centenary College as it works to serve students and the larger community. And they are words that are supported in some way by every person, place or event highlighted in this President's Annual Report and Honor Roll of Donors.

This document contains the accomplishments, financial data and features of the 2005-06 academic year, as one might expect in such an annual document. Additionally, it contains six stories that illustrate how the distinctive experiences, strong community and vibrant intellectual atmosphere found at Centenary add up to superior preparation—for students taking those first steps following graduation and later navigating the winding lifetime journey ahead of them.

Thank you for joining me in celebrating some of the highlights of the past year and a few of the stories that reflect what we're about. Thank you also for your continued support of the mission of Centenary College of Louisiana.

Sincerely,

Kenneth L. Schwab
President

majors. The biologists are currently ordering and receiving all of their proposed equipment, and everything should arrive for use by Spring 2007.

The grant will particularly benefit Centenary's revitalized neuroscience program with more than $50,000 worth of equipment for introductory and advanced courses. Advanced courses will soon provide students the opportunity to perform neurosurgery on mice and eventually create an on-campus breeding colony for mice, which will allow students to conduct much more imaginative experiments

In Spring 2006, Centenary College received a $1 million grant from NASA.

The equipment has begun to arrive: a $50,000 ADInstruments Psychophysiology Teaching System to test action potentials in earthworms and measure galvanic skin response in humans, a $10,000 SpeedVac to enable DNA sequencing, a $25,000 gel and immunoblot imaging system for protein structural analysis and medical research, $5,000 in skulls so students can hold vertebrate anatomy in their hands, and $3,500 in digital microscopes plus cameras and laptops that allow lab groups to make measurements and see images together. But that's nothing compared to what will come.

In Spring 2006, the natural sciences at Centenary received a $1 million appropriation from NASA and quickly divided the funds according to percentage of and independent studies.

Additionally, faculty may now involve students in summer research on campus rather than going to LSU Health Sciences Center or elsewhere for the necessary technology and equipment.

Thus, this grant will provide upgraded technology throughout the sciences, directly benefiting students. The biologists will completely renovate all their classrooms with white boards, ceiling-mounted projection systems and instructor computers. The NASA grant also completes the funding for new digital microscopes: an earlier grant from the Louisiana Board of Regents paid for seven, but the department needed twice that to outfit a classroom, replacing 40-year-old equipment that restricts teamwork and discourages cooperative problem solving.

Vibrant Intellectual Atmosphere

Dr. Scott Chirhart notes that these microscopes improve his teaching: “Each scope is connected to a camera that is connected to a laptop, so every student in the lab group can see the image at once and make digital measurements. This also makes teaching easier because I can project at the front of the classroom what the students should be seeing.”

Many biology classes will use these new microscopes, so almost all Centenary students will have access to this technology. After all, one of the main courses benefiting from this equipment is the popular core course Biology 101, or Principles of Biology: over half of Centenary students, both majors and non-majors, take this popular and innovative course.

In Fall 2000, Dr. Beth Leuck reorganized Biology 101 and 202 to be taught in “studio format,” which means students move fluidly between lecture and lab during a single class period. This inventive mode of teaching the biological sciences has put Centenary in a class of its own—no other Associated Colleges of the South schools and few other colleges and universities across the nation do this. Nevertheless, since that initial redesign, Centenary biology professors have continued to tweak the course, writing grants like these that allow them to make technological and pedagogical improvements.

Now they just wait to unpack all of the new equipment as the Department of Biology changes, responding to innovations in the field and creating a vibrant intellectual atmosphere for students. ■

KATIE MCKAY '04

Pursuing a master's of divinity degree at Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary, Katie McKay attributes much of her passion for learning and growth to the Centenary classroom. With the encouragement of professors who challenged and nurtured her, Ms. McKay's interest in religious studies has propelled her into political action, pastoral care and international travel. In just a few months, Ms. McKay will participate in a program called BorderLinks to study U.S. immigration policy and economics in Mexico.

“Studying religion here at Centenary encouraged me to explore our world in multiple dimensions. I can no longer just read about something—I have to see it, feel it, experience it, become a part of it. I spent four years at Centenary studying about the Holy Land and, just this past year, I finally got to sink my hands into the place that holds such a deep history of war and peace, life and death. It will forever be a time that changes the way I view the world.” ■

Distinctive Experiences

CHRIS LAVAN '06

“At Centenary the opportunities for leadership, change and making a difference are almost endless.”

What makes the Centenary experience incomparable? Maybe it's the boost in confidence students receive through peer and mentor support. Maybe it's the wide availability of opportunities propelling students toward leadership and success. Maybe it's a combination of both.

Chris Lavan attributes his success at Centenary and beyond to the encouragement and guidance he received from faculty. This singular experience, above all others, motivated him to accomplish his noteworthy goals.

“To be taught First-Year Experience by the head of the liberal arts program and the College president could be considered the highlight of anyone's undergraduate career,” Mr. Lavan says. “Instead, that experience was just the beginning of mine.”

As the first black president of the Centenary Student Government Association, Mr. Lavan made significant strides in advancing diverse leadership on campus. He also worked as a resident assistant and helped charter a minority fraternity.

All this he accomplished while taking a full class load and juggling countless other responsibilities. And more leadership roles awaited him beyond the 2006 commencement ceremony.

He now attends Louisiana State University, working toward his master's degree in higher education administration and public administration. Always one to tread new waters, he has been instrumental in developing the fledgling Volunteer LSU organization, the university's center for community service and involvement. Selected as a graduate assistant, he coordinates community service projects, like a recent New Orleans Service Day to help rebuild the Tulane/Gravier neighborhood, which was devastated by Hurricane Katrina.

According to Mr. Lavan, his extracurricular experiences at Centenary and the opportunities to work with solid faculty prepared him for graduate studies and his work at Volunteer LSU.

“At Centenary,” he says, “the opportunities for leadership, change and making a difference are almost endless.” ■

As 2005-06 president of the Student Government Association, Chris Lavan rings the historic College bell to signal the beginning of Morning Call on Founders' Day 2006.

RACHEL POWELL '08

Some Centenary students study in a foreign country for a semester or two. Here's the story of one student who took a semester to practice dialogue and nonviolent direct action across the United States.

At the end of her first year, Rachel Powell received a pamphlet from a professor, introducing her to the Equality Ride. By the end of the summer, she was accepted for the two-month bus ride across the country, carrying 33 young people to 15 colleges, three military academies, and a conference. Their goal? Create dialogue on campuses that ban the enrollment of openly gay students.

Some visits began with peaceful protests while others found students, faculty and staff welcoming the conversations. Still other administrations refused to allow the group on their campuses.

Ms. Powell says without the support of Centenary professors like Dr. Michelle Wolkomir and Dr. Rodney Grunes, she would not have been able to join the Equality Ride. They helped her explore the experience as a scholarly internship and connect this organization with the historical and political study of social movements.

Just after beginning the Ride, Ms. Powell returned to Centenary to present some initial observations she had made about how such organizations are formed and how they coherently align the thoughts, emotions and goals of each member. That was just the beginning of a research project she and Dr. Wolkomir are conducting together.

“She has pushed me to think more critically ever since our first day of class in FYE (First-Year Experience) and is a wonderful mentor. It's awesome to have a teacher with such vested interest in a student,” Ms. Powell says. Now her own experience with the Equality Ride is the major case study in their research together.

Ms. Powell's preparation continues: “Centenary has more than given me the tools to work for social change.” ■

Strong Community

ASHLEY JUNOT '06

"The things I do now in New Orleans, in graduate school and with karate demonstrate how well Centenary has prepared me for real life."

Director of Project NOAH, a hurricane relief program. Member of the U.S. National Women's Team in Shotokan Karate. Graduate student at the Tulane School of Social Work. This is Ashlie Junot, a 2006 Centenary graduate.

As Hurricanes Katrina and Rita hit the Gulf Coast, Ms. Junot felt she had to act: being a member of the Centenary community meant contributing and believing that real change was possible. She and other Centenary students spent Fall Break 2005 in the New Orleans area, and then she joined another group for more relief work this past January. She says she was continually motivated by the service and compassion she saw in her fellow workers, especially as Chaplain Betsy Eaves planned that first fall trip for Centenary students just five weeks after Katrina hit.

So, when the opportunity arose for her to help plan another trip for Centenary faculty, staff and students over Spring Break 2006, she immediately accepted, developing relationships with professors to help write petitions and seek SGA funding while connecting with organizations in Slidell and New Orleans through the Chaplain's Office.

"The planning itself was a testament to Centenary's sense of community," Ms. Junot says. "We experienced it together, we worked together, we appreciated it together, we cried and walked around the Ninth Ward together, and we came back...changed; we grew together."

In fact, she was so changed by those brief mission trips that she felt compelled to spend her summer following graduation working long hours and sleeping on the floor of a church with other Project NOAH (New Orleans Area Hope) volunteers in Slidell. As staff, she helped host groups of teenagers from all over the country who were coming to do demolition and repair work in several hurricane-struck homes.

All this while beginning graduate school at the Tulane School of Social Work and continuing to train as a national karate champion.

For the past 15 years, Ms. Junot has studied Shotokan Karate, having earned a second-degree black belt. The Southern Collegiate Champion from 2003 to 2005, she was the National Women's Collegiate Champion in kumite (the sparring competition) and the runner-up in kata (detailed patterns of movements) at the national tournament in 2004. This performance earned her a spot on the United States National Women's Team, but she chose not to travel with the team internationally for the tournament that conflicted with Centenary commencement this past spring.

However, at the 2006 national tournament, she again finished at the top in kata and earned another spot on the U.S. National Women's Team, which will travel to Philadelphia in June 2007 and then to Venezuela in August 2007 for the Pan-American Championships.

In the meantime, she teaches beginner karate at Tulane University and now serves as the director for Project NOAH, continuing to put real faces on a large-scale problem that once overwhelmed her:

Strong Community

“The first time I walked around the Ninth Ward, I felt an overwhelming sense of invasion and despair. I sat on lone concrete steps that used to lead to the front door of someone’s home and felt empty. It was a moment of hopelessness. I left a big part of myself there. That feeling stayed with me. So in the next months I seized some opportunities and learned some important lessons. I think there are a lot of situations where we are powerless and our limitations prevent us from changing the circumstances that surround us. I don’t believe the disaster in New Orleans is one of those situations. The truth is there is plenty we can do, plenty we ought to want to do and plenty we ultimately should feel privileged to do.”

Ms. Junot says Centenary taught her how to recognize opportunities, assess situations critically, and move from thought to action and create social change. During four years here, she stretched her mind with long study hours, her body with a rigorous training schedule and her soul struggling alongside old friends and new. Centenary taught Ashlie Junot how to search for answers and act boldly on promising solutions, to dialogue about ideas and worthwhile causes, to combine information with perspective and passion.

“The things I do now in New Orleans, in graduate school and with karate demonstrate how well Centenary has prepared me for real life,” she says. So she continues doing now what she did as a student on campus: she helps strengthen the Centenary community and beyond with real service to our world. ■

DREW SUTTON '03

Named the youngest recipient of the Bentley Sloane Alumni Award given by Centenary’s Christian Leadership Center, Drew Sutton has fused his passion for technology and ministry to serve the local church in this digital age. At Centenary, Mr. Sutton was elected president of the Student Government Association and was voted Homecoming King and Pacesetter while earning his degree in communication. Since graduation, he has served as director of media and communications and technology coordinator at two Shreveport churches, using cutting-edge technology. He supervises multimedia at Louisiana’s Annual Conference and recently completed a documentary of how Hurricane Katrina affected United Methodist churches in the New Orleans area.

“Centenary, a place that challenged me, pushed me, helped me and taught me. Now I look back and say ‘What a great adventure!’... Because of Centenary, I’m prepared for the next adventure farther down the road.” ■

› Once again, Centenary earns high national rankings. In U.S. News & World Report, the College is listed as No. 5 among 15 institutions designated as the South's "Great Schools, Great Prices" and No. 10 among the 65 top Southern colleges and universities-master's degrees. Princeton Review ranked Centenary one of the nation's best institutions for undergraduate education in its The Best 361 Colleges.

First-year students participate in a service project during Orientation.

› For the first time, first-year students perform a service project during Orientation, helping out at seven community agencies. The activity is an introduction to civic responsibility as new students begin their Centenary experience.

› Centenary and LSU Health Sciences Center professors receive funding for phosphoproteomics research. Dr. Cynthia Brame, assistant professor of biology at Centenary, and Dr. Lucy Robinson, associate professor of biochemistry and molecular biology at LSU Health Sciences Center in Shreveport, receive funding for the second year from the Louisiana Board of Regents totaling $66,920.

› Hurricane Katrina hits New Orleans and Southwest Louisiana and plays havoc with students throughout the state, including many from Centenary. The College provides shelter for evacuees from Dillard University and extends its enrollment period to Sept. 6 to accommodate displaced students at all Louisiana institutions. Additionally, the College becomes the site for community involvement forums and for individual and group assistance activities and fundraisers. A group of students and staff later give up their semester breaks to assist with recovery efforts in South Louisiana.

high winds to Shreveport. Immediately following the dedication ceremony, the campus cancels all activities and sends home all students living in unaffected areas until the storm passes. The threatened local problems do not materialize, though Southeast Louisiana is severely impacted and several Centenary students and their families are affected.

› Shakespeare's Blackfriars Stage Company performs again at Centenary, bringing its Atomic Fission Tour to campus for a week.

› Several Centenary professors implement research and enhancement programs in Fall 2005 thanks to grants they receive from the Louisiana Board of Regents.

› The 19th annual Centenary Book Bazaar donates a portion of its proceeds to Hurricane Relief.

October 2005

› Six new $100,000 endowed professorships are put in place following the completion of matching funds announced by the Louisiana Board of Regents. The funding, matched with $360,000 from Centenary, enable the following endowed professorships at Centenary:

- The William Arceneaux Endowed Professorship in Foreign Language, which was presented along with a tribute to Sgt. Robin Fell, a Centenary student killed in action in Iraq in May.

- Two Dr. Charles T. Beaird Endowed Professorships of Philosophy
- The John Spencer and Virginia Doyle Hardy Endowed Professorship, and
- Two A.C. "Cheesy" Voran Choir Director Endowed Professorships.

November 2005

› Congressman Jim McCrery announces

$1 million for Centenary among $3.05 million for Northwest Louisiana groups. In announcing the grants, Rep. McCrery says: "Centenary College of Louisiana is home to one of the nation's premier undergraduate science curriculums. It is the only college that offers students the opportunity to combine lecture and laboratory into one class, an approach that has served as a national model for science research and education. Current research is focused on proteomics, or the mapping of protein sequences within a human gene. To support ongoing faculty and student research, Centenary will receive $1 million toward the purchase of new lab technologies, including a mass spectrometer, Western blotting equipment and data analysis software."

Honor Roll of Donors

Dear Donors,

Thank you. As I have come to know more and more of you, I love my job more and more. You are generous, insightful, honest. You pursue interesting and valuable vocations and avocations. You build buildings, sing in church choirs, own companies, teach second graders, guide troubled teens, perform surgery, write poetry.

Some of you live in mansions. Some of you are renting your first apartment. Some of you give because you once received much-needed financial aid. Some of you have never needed financial aid.

Whatever your past or present circumstances, you are clearly willing to give so that others might enjoy a meaningful future. Your investments in educating new generations of Centenary students make that clear. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Katherine Fell

Where the sleepy, silver bayou
Gleams among the pines,
Watching o'er the throbbing city
Alma Mater shines.

CHORUS

Forward, forward, Centenary—
Time and tide may fail,
But our hearts shall love thee ever—

Centenary, Hail!
